- 3) 22-23 DESSA trend data presentation-
Dr. Mahon offered a brief update regarding the district-wide DESSA results from the inaugural administration during the spring, 2023. While the trend data demonstrates consistency across the district and that, for the most part, students present with strong social and emotional competence levels, Dr. Mahon highlighted the orientation to use of the tool and the resources that are available to teachers and administrators through the Aperture platform. Social-emotional learning is the precursor to soft-skill development and is supported through a variety of practices in school, including school-wide philosophies such as the RULER approach, developmental counseling lessons, cultivating positive teacher-student interactions, and high-quality curriculum and instruction. The DESSA also helps make educators mindful of the social-emotional competencies that are integral to soft and academic skill development.
